Your City in Action

Online Service to City Hall

City information offered online can bring City Hall directly to your home or office:

- City Council and board meeting information, including agendas, minutes, and news are posted.
- Forms for filing business licenses, reserving a park, or obtaining a building permit are there as well.
- A broad library research tool, the materials databases of libraries linked within Idaho, can be accessed using information from your current library card. Even without a library card, events, programs, and general reference guides are posted.
- BILL PAYMENT allows you to see a year's history of water meter usage, what the charges for that usage were, and when payments were posted. You can pay online, saving all the production of mail delivery and its harmful effects to the environment.
- Through BILL PAYMENT an email database is collected by which we can send your monthly bill, this newsletter, and any other important information electronically. When you set up your monthly online BILL PAYMENT through our website, you may choose to no longer have your bill mailed to you. This service is important in reducing many costs and ill-effects associated with the production and delivery of printed paper. Simply paying online through your bank's bill pay system will NOT give you (and our environment) this complete benefit.

We encourage you to log on right now to www.haileycityhall.org with your utility bill in hand, enter your email address and your account number, and choose paperless!

Volunteer Effort by Local Student Nets $721 Donation to City

A small booth was set up last summer at the Hailey Farmer's & Artist's market, from which homemade cookies were sold for fifty cents apiece. The booth's occupants explained to customers that the purpose of the booth was to raise money to help fight global warming.

Amanda Moulton, a local college student home for summer, occupied the booth with her mother, Janice. Their cookies were baked at home and sold beneath a sign designed by her brother Bryce, with a world map logo upon which the continents looked a bit like chocolate chip cookies. The sign read "Bake a Better World."

Approximately 16 dozen cookies per week were sold over a period of 12 weeks. At the end of that time, after selling 150 dozen cookies, Amanda Moulton and her family showed up at city hall with a check for $721.01. Their donation was made to the Hailey climate protection effort specifically for the purpose of installing some of the new compact fluorescent light bulbs planned for city facilities. Formerly an employee of the Hailey Public Library, Amanda had requested that the funds be used to help the library's portion of the lighting retrofit project.

Congratulations to Amanda Moulton and her family for putting forth this remarkable and sustained effort.
